Background

This workshop will:

- present state agency updates on the progress of technical vehicle-grid integration research;
- provide an opportunity to hear from researchers on the current progress of diverse vehicle-grid integration research and demonstration projects; and
- solicit stakeholder feedback on the direction of future research.

In March 2012, Governor Brown issued an executive order directing the state government to help accelerate the market for zero-emission vehicles (ZEVs) in California. Executive Order B-16-2012 establishes milestones on a path toward 1.5 million ZEVs in California by the year 2025. The 2013 ZEV Action Plan, created to identify strategies and actions state agencies will take to meet milestones of the executive order, is the product of an interagency working group led by the Governor's Office that includes the California ISO, the CPUC, the Energy Commission, the California Air Resources Board, and other state agencies and associated entities.

As part of the 2013 ZEV Action Plan, the California ISO, with input from multiple state agencies and stakeholders, created the California Vehicle-Grid Integration Roadmap to help commercialize vehicle-grid integration services to be provided by plug-in electric vehicle (PEV) batteries.

Vehicle-grid integration (VGI) services are an array of smart, grid-integrated PEV charging functions that can include one-way or two-way power flow capabilities. The purpose of the California VGI Roadmap is to aid vendors, policymakers, and researchers as related technologies are developed and refined.

The “Next Steps” section of the VGI Roadmap calls for the Energy Commission to host annual workshops to review progress on VGI research and demonstration projects. This event will be the third of these annual workshops.
